YALE

The sky turned red as the sun slipped below the horizon. Fond farewells were exchanged and the hatch was sealed. Neon triangulated a route back to the mothership, carrying the spirit of the Mother Road into the next century.

The rebuilt Space Cruiser-turned-hot rod could get Neon back on course. There was just one problem: fuel. As it turned out, human coffee was the perfect blend. Neon filled the tank and picked up some new kicks.

Neon zipped across Tulsa, scavenging pieces of the Cruiser, but reassembling the ship proved too much for one alien. A quick lunch stop led to new friends, full stomachs, and much-needed help.

Stranded with a busted ship, all hope seemed lost until the brilliant lights of Route 66 glowed in the distance drawing Neon into a line of movie superfans. Armed with an ejector seat jetpack, our hero rocketed off to explore.

The hull cracked as the Space Cruiser tore through Earth's atmosphere. Caught in a galactic-scale acoustic tornado, escape was impossible. All Neon, the alien, could do was hold on tight and brace for impact. What began as a cosmic catastrophe turned into the adventure of a lifetime, touching down in the most unexpected of places.

LOG UPDATE: ACCIDENT REPORT
 LOCATION: Tulsa, Earth
 CHARGE: Galactic-Scale Acoustic Tornado
 PROBLEM: Stranded, Ship in pieces. No Fuel.
 SOLUTION: Exceptionally Friendly Locals on Route 66
 RECOMMENDATION: 10/10 would Crash Again
 OVERALL RATING: ★★★★★

Established on November 11, 1926, Route 66 was championed by Tulsa's own Cyrus Avery. By 1936, it became the first major U.S. road fully paved from end to end. After World War II, the Mother Road faded a golden age of motels, diners, roadside attractions, and neon signs lighting up the landscape. The Interstate Highway Act of 1956 gradually pulled traffic away, and by 1985 Route 66 was officially removed from the U.S. Highway System. Now, 100 years later, the road refuses to disappear, its iconic glow still connecting people across Tulsa and beyond.

MapWorks Tulsa, Inc. is a non-profit 501(c)(3) organization with a diverse board of directors. Their mission is to enhance the lives of Tulsa citizens and visitors by illuminating Tulsa's diverse districts and to serve as an introduction to the city's spirit and energy. The organization fosters unity, inclusion, and identity through an artistic map and community outreach.

Long before Route 66, this land was home to the Ni-u-kon-ska (Osage), Kitikiti'sh (Wichita), and Kadahocacho (Caddo), later joined by the Muskoke/Muscogee (Creek) and Tsalagi (Cherokee) Nations, who were uprooted from their native lands. Native American Prima Ballerina Moseylene Larkin, one of the Five Moons, and co-founder of the Tulsa Ballet, carries that legacy forward to this day.
